World Zionists Open Board To Non-Zionists In Big Move Against Declining Influence And Dwindling Youth Numbers

The World Zionist Organization, concerned about its declining influence, opened its governing body to prominent Jews unaffiliated with Zionist groups.

It was the biggest structural change in the international organization since it achieved its main objective — the formation of the state of Israel in 1948, says James Feron, of the New York Times, from Jerusalem. This move broadened the Zionist Executive from a twenty-member body representing international organizations aligned with political parties in Israel to a thirty-member group more representative of Jewish communities abroad.

The new board will include a delegate of the Sephardic (mainly North African) communities; two from Latin America; two from Europe; four or five from the United States; and one from Israel.

The Americans named included: Dewey Stone, a Boston philanthropist, and chairman of the Jewish Agency, Inc.; Dr. Joseph Schwartz, executive vice-president of Israel Bonds; Rabbi Simon Greenberg, provost of the Jewish Theological Seminary; and Rabbi Emanuel Rackman, assistant to the president of Yeshiva University.

Israel Moses Sieff, board chairman of Marks & Spencer, a large British clothing store, who was recently made a baron by Queen Elizabeth,-was one of the two Europeans named to the Zionist executive.

The other was a Milan industrialist, Astorre Mayer, who is chairman of the Standing Conference of European Jewish Communities.

According to leaders of the sixty-eight-year-old organization, the greatest challenge facing the Zionists is the assimilation of Jews into non-Jewish communities. The Zionist Organization has felt that it has been losing contact with the younger Jews, those most susceptible to assimilation.

For this reason it decided, at the urging of Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the World Zionist Organization, to shift somewhat from the political to the spiritual field in drawing up its leadership.

The intention is to include the three major religious movements in Judaism — Reform, Conservative, and Orthodox — in the Zionist executive, although the representatives will not be elected as such.

The Zionist Organization brings immigrants to Israel and helps in their settlement. This work is done there by the Jewish Agency, which is the executive arm of the Zionist organization. Most of the funds for this work are raised by the United Jewish Appeal in the United States.

According to one Zionist leader in Jerusalem for the closing stage of the Zionist General Council, the organization's contact with Jewish youth has dwindled to about ten or fifteen per cent of the potential field, reports the New York Times. At one time much of youth "Aliyah", or immigration, to Israel was inspired through the Zionist political parties.

Zim Israel Motion To Dismiss Suit Denied In Collision Case

A U.S. Federal judge denied a motion by Zim Israel Navigation, Ltd., to dismiss its damage suit against the owners of the Norwegian tanker Stolt Dagali, with which the Zim liner Shalom collided on Thanksgiving Day, 1964, says the New York Times. "The court holds that this case has proceeded too far for the libelant to discontinue without prejudice, as a right, upon payment of statutory costs," District Judge David N. Edelstein wrote in his opinion.

The judge held that the suit might be discontinued only "upon terms and conditions which the court deems proper," and on this point he reserved decision. He said he would schedule a hearing to determine those terms and conditions.

Nineteen crew members of the 19,150-ton tanker were lost in a collision with the $20-million luxury liner, whose bow cut through the tanker in a fog off New Jersey.

The stern section of the tanker, owned by A-S Ocean, sank after the collision. The Shalom, which was outward bound from New York on a Caribbean cruise, returned to port under her own power.

Zim had urged that its suit be dismissed without prejudice, arguing that the Norwegian owners had begun court action of their own in Gothenburg, Sweden. The court proceedings, to determine any collision liability of the parties will be held in Sweden in any event.

A-S Ocean declined to discontinue its action against Zim in Gothenburg. As a result, Zim contended it should be allowed to discontinue the action in New York upon

THREE-FAITH COALITION AGA U. S. POVERTY, "MORALLY INTOLERABLE" IN RICH NATION, IS FORMED BY LAYMEN AND CLERGY, REPRESENTS TENS OF MILLIONS

Roman Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish leaders have formed a coalition against poverty, which they assailed as "morally intolerable" in the rich American nation. The National Catholic Welfare Conference, the National Council of Churches, and the Synagogue Council of America, working with other Jewish groups, says Nan Robertson, of the New York Times, created a forty-five member Inter-Religious Committee Against Poverty, in Washington.

Its mission is to "rally the full weight" of their constituencies behind the poverty campaign.

Those on the Committee, both laymen and clergy, directly represent hundreds of religious bodies of the three great faiths and indirectly represent tens of millions of Americans.

Vice President Humphrey and Sargent Shriver, director of the Office of Economic Opportunity, were present at the news conference announcing the group's formation. Both expressed enthusiasm.

The Rev. Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, of Philadelphia, Stated Clerk and Highest Official of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, said the Committee would support, coordinate, and criticize existing private and Governmental programs for the poor, and perhaps would suggest additional ones.

Mr. Humphrey said the members were translating their "faith into resounding action that will transform America."

The formation of the Committee is an important extension of the all-faith cooperation that helped produce the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

The Vice President said that "there wouldn't be any civil rights legislation without the margin of difference contributed by the clergy bringing their moral persuasion to bear. Every member of Congress knows that fact," Mr. Humphrey said.

The Committee immediately issued a joint statement by the six co-chairman for more poverty funds (which Mr. Humphrey assured them would be asked) and maximum participation for the poor in poverty programs, says the New York Times. "Hundreds of thousands of the poor are now participating in Governmental anti-poverty programs," Dr. Blake said. "Their opportunities must not be wasted or thwarted."

Calling participation of the poor "an integral party of the religious and democratic commitment to help people help themselves," the group deplored any attempt, national or local to dilute their involvement. Some big city mayors have resisted the demands of the poor for a voice in shaping community projects.

The group rejected suggestions that anti-poverty programs be cut back or held at the present levels because of the increasing military commitment in Vietnam. They called such proposals "a major retreat in the War on Poverty, and a major defeat for America."

The only other private anti-poverty organization to compare in scope with the Committee just formed, is the Citizens Crusade Against Poverty. That coalition of more than 125 groups and leaders in civil rights, labor, agriculture, teaching, and business is headed by Walter P. Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers. His union has given twelve million dollars to the crusade.

There is some cross-fertilization between the crusade and the inter-religious committee.

Mr. Reuther is a member of the inter-religious Committee and attended meeting. Dr. Blake is chairman of the crusade's Commission on Community Activity and Organization. The crusade also includes some religious groups, among them representatives from the three bodies that joined forces.

When asked if the Committee would direct ministers, priests and rabbis throughout the nation to "mount their pulpits" to preach involvement in the campaign against poverty, Dr. Blake replied:

"I expect them to preach the faith they profess to hold. It includes this commitment."

Another of the co-chairman, Rabbi Seymour Cohen, of Chicago, president of the Synagogue Council, rose in the conference room at the Capitol to give his answer, says the New York Times. "There is a concrete need to close the gap between the idealism of our faith and the stark realities of society," he said. "We have a moral imperative to rise, to speak, to stir to action."

The four other co-chairmen are: Louis Stern, of New York City, past president of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds; the Rev. Dr. Norman Baugher, of Elgin, Ill., general secretary of the Church of the Brethren General Brotherhood Board; the Most Rev. Robert E. Lucey, Catholic bishop, of San Antonio, Texas; and the Most Rev. Raymond J. Gallagher, Catholic bishop of Lafayette, Ind., formerly executive director of the National Conference of Catholic Charities.

The National Catholic Welfare Council is an association of about 300 American bishops. The National Council of Churches represents 30 Protestant, Anglican, and Greek Orthodox denominations. The Synagogue Council of America represents Orthodox, Conservative, and Reform rabbis and presidents of congregations.

In another development tonight, Mr. Shriver said he believed that "one of the great contributions of the War on Poverty" was that the plight of thirty million poor Americans had been made visible and understandable to other, more fortunate, Americans.

Was British Woman Zionist Leader, Lady Bountiful

Lady Sieff, a founder of the Women's International Zionist Organization and the wife of a noted British businessman, died at Tel Aviv, Israel, at the age of seventy-five years. Until the last week in December, Lady Sieff was Mrs. Rebecca Sieff. With the publication of Britain's New Year's honors list, her husband, Israel Moses Sieff, became a life peer. Lord Sieff is chairman and joint managing director of Marks & Spencer, the British department store chain and marketing organization, says the New York Times. His wife was the sister of the late Lord Marks, founder of Marks & Spencer.

Lady Sieff, who had made her home in Tel Mond, a settlement in western Israel, since 1938, had been suffering from a heart ailment. Her husband flew in from London when her condition worsened.

Mrs. Sieff was born in England and educated at Manchester University. She was one of the few front-rank Zionists who took her ideology as a personal commitment and made her home in Israel. In 1938 the family built a home at Tel Mond in Sharon near the Jordan border and Mrs. Sieff spent most of her years there even during periods of Arab incursions.

Together with Mrs. Chaim Weizmann, widow of Israel's first President, Lady Sieff founded the Women's International Zionist Organization forty-four years ago and was president until 1963. She was also a founder of the World Jewish Congress.

Lady Sieff was instrumental in the establishment, in memory of her son, of the Daniel Sieff Institute at Rehovoth, which became the nucleus of the Weizmann Institute of Science.

In 1938 she had a prominent role in a project that enabled one thousand children to escape from Nazi Germany to Britain as "agricultural workers." In 1936, after addressing a Palestine conference held in Berlin, she was banned by the Nazis from addressing other Zionist conferences held in Germany.

During World War II Lady Sieff toured the United States and Canada with the primary object of establishing closer contact between British women Zionists and the sister American organization. After the war she was among the first to reach the displaced persons camps in Germany and took ~~an active~~ part in relief work.

In 1956 she survived an Arab commando raid upon her villa at Tel Mond. Her head gardener was killed and she was thrown out of her bed by an explosion, says the New York Times. Lady Sieff's welfare work was recognized in 1960, when she was named an Officer in the Order of the British Empire.

DON'T EXPECT THE USUAL NOISE

when you fly to Britain on BOAC'S Super VC10

The new Super VC10 is the quietest aircraft you've ever flown in. That's because the four powerful Rolls-Royce jets are in the tail. So where's the noise? It's left way behind! Actually the jets are in the tail to make the Super VC10 easier to fly. It gets off the ground faster, uses less runway, lands slower. The lack of noise is really just a bonus. So are the comfortable new seats which we designed specially for this aircraft. Like to try them? Take the Super VC10 to Britain. February 28, the first one leaves from Montreal for London. Thereafter, several services weekly. Daily from April 25. See your Travel Agent.

★ ISRAEL BONDS ★

Mrs. Golda Meir, who retired this month as Foreign Minister of the State of Israel, will be guest of honor at an international tribute to her leadership in statecraft and nation-building, at the 1966 Inaugural Conference for Israel Bonds in Miami, Florida. Samuel Rothberg, National campaign chairman of Israel Bonds, is chairman of the meeting. The dinner is on February 20 at the Fontainebleau Hotel, in Miami Beach. The conference will mark the 15th anniversary of the Israel Bond Organization, in which Mrs. Meir played a major role together with the late Eliezer Kaplan, Israel's first Finance Minister, and former Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion. PROHIBITS

DISCRIMINATION IN EMPLOYMENT

THE PURPOSE OF THE ACT is to protect workers against discrimination in employment and in trade union membership on the grounds of RACE, RELIGION, COLOUR or NATIONAL ORIGIN.

THE ACT APPLIES TO employers in works or undertakings under federal jurisdiction and to trade unions representing persons employed therein. These undertakings include shipping, navigation, railways, canals, telegraphs, aerodromes, airlines, federal crown corporations, banking, radio and television broadcasting, as well as works or undertakings that have been declared to be for the general advantage of Canada, or are outside the exclusive jurisdiction of the provincial legislatures.

THE ACT FORBIDS an employer to refuse to employ a person or to discriminate against an employee because of his RACE, RELIGION, COLOUR, or NATIONAL ORIGIN. An employer is also forbidden to use an employment agency which practices such discrimination, or to publish employment advertising which is discriminatory, or to use discriminatory questions, written or oral, in connection with applications for employment.

THE ACT ALSO FORBIDS discriminatory action by trade unions in regard to union membership or employment on the grounds of RACE, RELIGION, COLOUR or NATIONAL ORIGIN.

ANY PERSON MAKING A COMPLAINT under the provisions of the Act, or giving evidence or assistance in proceedings under the Act, is protected from any retaliatory action that may be taken against him.

In addition to the federal legislation several of the provinces also have fair employment practices laws or similar legislation which protect workers from discrimination in employment in industries which fall under provincial jurisdiction in the province concerned. Provinces in which such legislation is in existence are Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia.

Why wait for spring?

In winter, men are available. Materials are available. And special off-season discounts are often available. So, doesn't it make a lot of sense to have those repairs and renovations done now. Not simply construction and building jobs—but things like having the lawnmower fixed and the screens mended, having the drapes cleaned and the rugs shampooed; having the furniture re-upholstered and the electrical appliances repaired. All jobs which can call for a long wait come Springtime—but which can be handled quickly, efficiently and easily during the winter season. What's more, government-sponsored, low-cost Home Improvement loans are available through your bank, to assist you in carrying out all kinds of renovation jobs you've been meaning to do—up to $4,000 with up to ten years to repay!

No doubt about it—winter is the best time to spruce up your home or place of business. Do it now!

Everybody benefits when winter work is increased

CONVERSIONS TO REFORM JUDAISM HAVE TRIPLED IN N.Y. AREA IN LAST DECADE

Conversions to Reform Judaism in this area have tripled in the last decade, according to a report from the New York Federation of Reform Synagogues. A study, based on ten years of conversion classes conducted at the House of Living Judaism, 838 Fifth Avenue, shows that: Conversions have become more readily acceptable in our social structure; converts are extremely devoted and dedicated members of the Jewish faith with a large majority joining synagogues; and that in Judaism, marriage accounts for 90% of the converts.

In additional interviews analyzing the ten years of classes, leaders of Reform Judaism continue to stress that Jewish religious groups will only convert non-Jews who are no longer identified with another faith. However, a number of Reform Jewish laymen and rabbis desire that the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, national congregational body of 660 Reform temples in the United States and Canada, pursue a more aggressive campaign to win the unchurched and unsynagogued.

The Federation, a regional affiliate of the UAHC, conducts conversion classes for its 101 member Reform temples in the greater metropolitan area and eastern Connecticut. Reform temples in nearby New Jersey also send their converts to the classes.

The report, covering the years 1954-64, stated that the classes, which were initiated by the Federation a decade ago, had grown in enrollment from less than one hundred to more than three hundred annually.

Last year, from January to the middle of June, 150 students entered the course, 45 men and 105 women; 91 of this group completing the nine-week course in basic Judaism, and their conversion ceremonies took place during the summer. In 1954, the Federation began with four classes and this number has increased to eight per year. A group of rotating rabbinic teachers conduct the lessons. The summer session began with three enrollees and a July class had 29 attendants.

Rabbi Daniel L. Davis, director of the New York Federation, commented on the increase: "I think there has been a change in the psychology of individuals in that they do not regard inter-marriage as a situation in which the Jewish party is looked upon as someone who is deserting Judaism. Accordingly, the Jewish family does not reject the child who is party to an inter-marriage. This has a tendency to draw the non-Jewish party closer to the family and thus eases a great area of tension in an inter-marriage. This also makes it more easily acceptable for the non-Jewish party to think of becoming Jewish."

Rabbi Davis estimated that during the past decade Reform Judaism has converted about 16,000 people. This figure has sharply increased during the past few years by several hundred, so that today the annual figure is well over the 2,000 mark. He observed that, based on the registration statistics and information gathered throughout the country, that 90% of the Jewish conversions are due to marital reasons.

The Federation report, gathered by Mrs. Richard M. Stern, coordinator for classes for prospective converts, noted that about 80% of converts join congregations, while only 50% of 'born Jews' are members, and that the convert is a more informed Jew, accepted by members of the congregation and increases the learning desire of the Jewish partner.

On December 10, 1963, the Federation began gathering more comprehensive data on persons registering for conversion classes including family background, former religious affiliation, and Jewish background. As a result, data gathered between December 1963-64, showed that of 295 registered students, 205 were women and 90 were men. In this group, 36 people (16 men, 20 women) came to study Judaism without partners.

On the question of the parents' religion of the prospective convert, 277 reported both parents were of the child's faith; 5 parents were of the same faith (not the child's) and in 63 cases, both parents came from different faiths.

The religious background designated by the 295 students on the cards showed that 170 were Roman Catholic; 21 Protestant; 20 Methodist; 19 Episcopalian; 18 Lutheran; 12 Presbyterian; and the remainder divided among other Protestant denominations.

Rabbi Davis explained the large Roman Catholic tabulation as indicative of New York only perhaps due to the fact that many Jews and Italians work together and go to school together in that city.

The statistics on the Jewish partners recorded 259 (36 came without partners). Here 99 said both parents were members of the same branch of Judaism and in 160 cases the parents came from either different branches of Judaism, mixed marriages, or both Christian. In this group, 108 said they were presently affiliated with either a Reform, Conservative, or Orthodox synagogue.

At this year's UAHC biennial general assembly in San Francisco, November 13-18, delegates are expected to discuss a resolution proposed by the Union's Committee on Proselytism calling for the formulation of a program to win "converts to Reform Judaism among the unaffiliated, both unsynagogued and unchurched." The chairman of the committee is Solomon Stern, of Boston, Mass.

Rabbi Balfour Brickner, director of interfaith activities of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, observed that such an open program of proselytism will not have adverse effect on the good interreligious relations existing today between Jews and Christians.

"Christians have always wondered why Jews do not seek converts more actively," Rabbi Brickner said. "They can and would understand an intensification in this direction, since proselytization is a central part of their own Christian faiths."

In referring to conversions to Judaism of public figures such as the late Marilyn Monroe and Elizabeth Taylar, Rabbi Brickner said, "We are skeptical of these conversions and accept them only when such converts demonstrate that theirs is a conversion made in good faith. Sammy Davis, Jr., who converted to Reform Judaism, had proven his positive Jewish commitment. While Jews do not seek converts, neither do they reject or deny those who wish to become Jews.

"Those looking for cheap, quick emotional religious experiences, without concomitant willingness to be daily involved in social justice, education, and worship, will not find happiness or satisfaction in Judaism. In the final analysis a rabbi cannot make a Jew out of a non-Jew. Judaism is truly a way of life, a culture, an ethos, which can be fully understood only by long term exposure and experience. A teacher or rabbi can expose a non-Jew to the history of Judaism, the customs of Judaism, the language of Judaism, but these no more make a person Jewish than learning French or French history makes one a Frenchman. To become Jewish one must live as a Jew and with Jews and participate in the life of the Jewish community."

He said that to him, "one of the most interesting developments" was the creation of Women In Community Service.

"It's composed of all four of the major religiously oriented women's organizations in the United States, and for the first time these four groups — Protestants, Catholics, Jewish People, and Negro women — have all gotten together" to fight poverty", reports the New York Times. payment of court costs, without prejudice to its filing a cross-claim in the pending Gothenburg suit.

A court action dismissed without prejudice may be refiled later at the option of the complainant.

The Norwegians argued that the action at the United States Courthouse in New York had imposed great expense and that it would be unfair to allow Zim to discontinue the suit without giving Ocean a chance to litigate the merits of Zim's claims, says the New York Times. Ocean does not object to the discontinuance of the Zim suit, if the terms include a ban on Zim's right to bring suit in any court other than that in Gothenburg.

J. L. C. ASKS U. S. TO PROTECT JEWS AGAINST JOB BIAS

The inclusion of Jews among the minority groups to be protected by the Federal government against job discrimination has been urged by the Jewish Labor Committee. The proposal was submitted in December to a hearing held in Washington, D.C., by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, which was conducted by the chairman of the Commission, Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., for the purpose of obtaining public reaction to a proposal that some 60,000 of the nation's largest firms be required to submit annual reports on their minority hiring practices. The Jewish Labor Committee's testimony was provided by Emanuel Muravchik, national director.

"The best available research," stated Mr. Muravchik, "fully supports the assertion that discrimination against Jews continues in our major centers of Jewish population in white collar, technical, administrative, executive, and professional employment. Therefore, any proper reporting process, like any proper enforcement procedure, must deal with discrimination against Jews as well as Negroes, Hispanic Americans, American Indians, and orientals."

The method of reporting, advocated by the Jewish Labor Committee's spokesman would avoid questioning each individual employee as to his religion or race. Instead, several alternative types of surveys were proposed which, while not requiring workers to specify their religion or race, would give the Commission an accurate description of the ethnic composition of a company's work force.

Among the possible methods proposed were identification by management and supervisory employees; anonymous return postcards to be filled in by the individual workers; or, for the Jewish workers specifically, a check on Rosh Hashonah and Yom Kippur absences. The question of religious identification of workers, even for purposes of eliminating discrimination, is a controversial one among Jewish community relations organizations.

In support of its stand in favor of the annual report approach, the Jewish Labor group pointed out that its 25 years of experience in working for equal job opportunity had long ago convinced it that voluntary methods, spot checks, and reliance on individual complaints were "completely inadequate." "Periodic reporting by all employers covered by law is essential" to the goal of equal employment opportunity, the JLC stated.

N. Y. City College Admits Negro Frat

A fraternity with predominantly Negro membership was recognized for the first time as an official organization at City College. There had previously been only a half-dozen Negro students scattered among the school's 36 fraternities and sororities.

The group, the Zeta Psi chapter of Omega Psi Phi, gained the college's recognition by joining a federation called the Interfraternity Council.

Irwin L. Brownstein, the Council's faculty advisor, said Omega Psi Phi had been invited to join "to provide leadership for other Negro students going to the college. There's a great deal that they can teach us on the subtleties of relations with the Harlem community," he added.

On its own initiative, the fraternity, with forty active members has been involved in such programs as tutorial work with neighborhood youngsters and the maintenance of a coffee house "to keep kids off the street."

Douglas Thomas, secretary of Omega Psi Phi, said that he hoped the move would lead to increased Negro membership in major campus organizations. He and other student leaders conceded that the percentage of active Negro students is very low, says the New York Times. In 1961, fraternity officials unsuccessfully attempted to persuade a predominantly Negro fraternity to take out a charter.

THE ISRAELI STUDENTS AND RELIGION: SOME VERY PLAIN TRUTHS

"The Israeli student expects nothing from religion so he is indifferent to it. This includes the Orthodox students who live their religion as a habit. It does not stir them or disturb them. For Jewish religion in Israel has not been able to achieve that degree of expression which could commend itself to the attention of Israel's young intellectuals."

This is the view of a man who probably has more personal contact with Israeli students than any other person in the State, the director of the Hillel Foundation at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, Rabbi Jack Cohen. He writes of his experiences in the current issue of Conservative Judaism published by the Rabbinical Assembly, the international association of Conservative rabbis. The editor is Rabbi S. Gershon Levi, of the Jamaica Jewish Center, formerly of Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue in Montreal.

Rabbi Cohen is sympathetic with the Israeli students who, he says, face moral and spiritual challenges of great complexity and severity. They are heirs of revolutionaries who could not hope to transmit the values that guided them to their children, since new conditions call for new values. "Their sons and daughters live in a different context for which, unfortunately, their education has ill-equipped them." A new type of idealism is required by a generation which has never known what it means to live without the State of Israel.

It may be difficult for Americans to understand, but the patriotism of many an Israeli sabra (native-born) is in direct proportion to what he thinks the State of Israel is doing for him. Otherwise, why have twenty per cent of the graduates of Hebrew University Medical School left the country, presumably with no intention of returning, and why do students respond so avidly to job opportunities abroad?

Obviously, he replies, because their personal careers are more important to them than considerations of Zionism, patriotism, or religious devotion to Eretz Yisrael."

But, lest American Jews moralize about this fact, Rabbi Cohen hastens to remind them that the "sabra" who leaves Israel for reasons of personal fulfillment, is no less noble than the American Zionist who, for very similar reasons, will not come to live in Israel.

Even the matter of Israel's defense is not a matter of profound idealism as it was before the creation of the State. "Today that idealism has been institutionalized by conscription. Despite the fact that, objectively, Israel is in a hazardous situation, the 'sabra' has no chance to rise subjectively to his responsibility by virtue of his own physical capacity," Rabbi Cohen says. "He is drafted. And when he is through with his army service he begins the fierce competition for career."

As for what religion has to say to the student, Rabbi Cohen puts Yavneh, the Orthodox campus organization, under his glass. Yavneh claims 700-900 members (the exact number is not known because no dues are charged and office procedures are "primitive").

"This is about 13 per cent of the students on the Jerusalem campus, and it is fairly safe to assume that the Orthodox students reflect the percentage of Orthodox in the general population, perhaps a little less."

The only activity which elicits the involvement of the bulk of the Orthodox students is attendance at religious services.

Beth Hillel is filled every Friday evening and Saturday morning. But, Rabbi Cohen points out, of the 450 who overflow the hall which has seats for only 350, only about 250-300 are university students. The rest are high school students, people from the vicinity, and tourists. The Orthodox students who do not come to Hillel presumably go to services elsewhere, he says.

Rabbi Cohen writes that he has found the overwhelming majority of the Orthodox students to be uninterested in religious discussion. They have come to Hebrew University for purposes of career, and not for spiritual orientation or reorientation.

"Few of them are offended by the political involvements of their spiritual leaders and there is "no open critique of the rabbinate or religious parties such as one finds in the Orthodox kibbutzim. There is little evidence that this generation of Orthodox youth is ready for any serious self-analysis," Rabbi Cohen comments.

"As for the non-Orthodox, they are in complete agreement with most of the Orthodox that there be no dialogue between them. Both groups live in separate universes of discourse which have no point of contact. The best that can be obtained is an agreement to co-exist."

"The non-Orthodox students are interested in the religion-and-state issue, because of its bearing on the daily life of every citizen in Israel, but they show no sign of concern for the positive aspect of Jewish religion."

Rabbi Cohen has proposed to the executive committee of the Students' Organization a University co-sponsorship with Hillel for a Warsaw Ghetto Day or Day of Memorial for the soldiers who fell in Israel's War of Liberation, and while the response has been favorable, "the students are always careful to dissociate the programs from any religious connections."

Despite what he admits to be a "pessimistic report," Rabbi Cohen sees some hopeful signs: (a) There is a marked change for the better in the attitude of government circles on relations with the diaspora (outside world). (b) Jewish students from all parts of the world are coming to Israel who, by their very presence, are forcing Israelis to face the reality of a world-wide Jewry and a pluralistic Judaism at Hebrew University, headed by Professor Moshe Davis, and similar programs at other institutions. Judaism is becoming a respectable subject for serious and responsible intellectual investigation," Rabbi Cohen says hopefully.

Diners Not Orthodox But Rabbis Picket Non-Kosher Dinner Anyway

Fifteen Jews, most of them New York rabbis, recently picketed a Federation of Jewish Philanthropies dinner at the Astor Hotel, at 44th Street and Broadway. The complaint of the pickets was that the dinner was non-kosher, says the New York Herald Tribune. The picket line was put up by the Kashruth Supervisors Union, Local 261, whose members supervise the manufacture and preparation of kosher foods.

The union has picketed other dinners, including one held by the Anti-Defamation League, according to Rabbi H. J. Hurwitz, a union spokesman.

The union members picketed from 5:30 p.m. to 7, at the hotel's Broadway and 44th St. entrances. They carried signs reading, "Support Kashruth Observance", and "Don't Attend Non-Kosher Affairs."

The dinner guests, who numbered about 200, filed past the pickets with apparent unconcern. Asked for his reaction to the protest, one of the guests shrugged and said: "So?" His attitude seemed typical.

"This is not an issue with any one but Orthodox Jews, and most of the people here are not Orthodox," another guest said.

The dinner was sponsored by the accountants division of the Federation. Harry Rosen, who was in charge of the planning for the event, said that some division dinners were kosher and others weren't.

Before the dinner, a spokesman for the Federation said that Federation dinners — as opposed to Federation division dinners — were always kosher. "For the dinners held by the various divisions, it's up to the planning committees," he said, reports the New York Herald Tribune. Rabbi Hurwitz said that he was planning to picket other events. He said that he would withhold pickets of the sponsors of non-kosher dinners and would advertise them as such.

EBAN SAYS NEW GOVERNMENT TO STRENGTHEN BOND WITH ZIONISTS

Addressing the Zionist General Council, of the World Zionist Organization, Abba Eban, Deputy Prime Minister, said in Tel Aviv:

"The new Government will make effort to strengthen its collaboration with the Zionist Movement and with the Jewish communities throughout the world in order to build up a great future together.

"Zionism is part and parcel of our social fabric. An inseverable bond of mutual responsibility connects us. Israel will follow your deliberations on immigration, education, and the fostering of bonds with the Diaspora (community outside of Israel) with the greatest concern and expectation."

Referring to immigration from the West, Mr. Eban said that even if immigration from the countries of stress were plentiful, Israel could not very well renounce the specific contribution that Western Jewry was capable of making to the upbuilding of a just and creative Jewish society.

Speaking of Israel's situation in the international arena, Mr. Eban said: "True, many are the points of tension and of destructive aggression in the world today, but the urge for peace has also been given strong expression in our generation. This is the case also in the Middle East. On the one hand, there are incessant threats of aggression; on the other hand, there is the strong desire of Israel, and of other factors in the world to stem any possible flare-up. Even in the Arab world there are signs of an ideological duel between those who believe in the destruction of Israel and those who in their deep conscience have come to realize that this cannot be.

"The stronger Israel will be, the more peace-loving nations will exert their influence in the advancement of peace and for the honouring of the independence and integrity of nations, to the extent that a more effective and consistent international policy will be crystallized for a balancing of the race of armament. The more Israel advances, in its collaboration with the developing world, the greater will be the prospects of creating in the Arab world a readiness to recognize the necessity of coexistence between the two peoples which had succeeded in raising this part of the world to its great status in the dawn of history", Mr. Eban concluded.

Statement Of The Canadian Jewish Congress On The Issue Of Training Of German Soldiers At Camp Shiloh, Manitoba

The Jewish citizens of Canada recognize with other Canadians the value to Western democracy of the Atlantic Alliance as well as the necessity of the NATO Treaty. They fully understand that Canadian commitments necessitate obligations in the creation of a military establishment and facilities for its training. At the same time it is an inescapable fact of social and political life that emotions are deeply stirred when such obligations confront a large number of people who, personally, or whose families, underwent unparalleled pain and suffering at the hands of Nazi Germany, of which the Wehrmacht and allied military units were the symbol.

The Canadian Jewish Congress must assume that, in the discharge of Canada's treaty obligations whereby responsibility exists for the training of military personnel by a cadre of German officers, care is taken that this country is not hospitable to those very forces which were integral parts of the machinery of death and destruction of millions of innocent civilians. It is therefore hoped that the understandable emotions and reactions of a large number of newcomers to this country, particularly, as well as of others of our population, will not be flouted by a disregard of the principle involved.

What is the A. B. C. or Audit Bureau of Circulations, and what is its importance?

A. The A. B. C. is a voluntary association of major publishers, advertisers, national and local; and advertising agencies, working together to police circulation claims, and to translate them into facts.

Q. Why are circulation facts so important?

A. Circulation figures are the only honest basis on which print advertising is sold and purchased. Publishers base their prices for advertising on the amount of their circulation, and its quality. An advertiser buys circulation. A. B. C. circulation facts tell him the exact amount at any time.

Q. How does an advertiser know that this is really so?

A. A. B. C. publishers keep exact records of all circulation receipts for subscriptions and single copy sales. These can tell him, too, whether the circulation is sold without a premium, or with one, to induce payment; or whether the circulation is composed of membership in an organization; or whether it is sold on its merit alone. Was the subscription sold on a special rate? Was it paid by mail directly to the publisher, or to an agent? These are just some of the categories of subscription payments which are recorded.

Q. Why are some of these answers so important?

A. Sometimes these answers can tell an advertiser whether the subscriber needs to be coaxed into continuing, or starting. Are subscribers voluntarily buying the publication? Do they need a cut-rate or an added attraction to keep on?

Q. How are the figures checked?

A. The publisher checks his figures, and reports them twice a year to the head office of the A. B. C. These are audited once a year by travelling A. B. C. auditors, who check the names, the receipts, the printing invoices, the bank deposits, the paper used, the ink used, the postage receipts — all of these show the number of copies printed or mailed; and paid for. If an A. B. C. field auditor goes to work for a publication whose books he has audited within a year or so, there is an automatic re-audit by another auditor. An auditor does not audit the figures of any publication for more than two consecutive years.

Q. Does the A. B. C. allow past-due subscriptions?

A. The A. B. C. rules state that all subscriptions up for renewal must be paid within three months of the expiry date. The publisher must keep track of each one. These are considered paid, but not completely so, until paid in full, for the term to come.

Q. Are new subscriptions considered as paid?

A. Not until payment is received for the term in advance.

Q. What does this cost the publisher?

A. The publisher considers the membership as his investment to protect the investment of each advertiser. The publisher pays quarterly dues; the cost of the auditing done in his office, by the hour; and the cost of checking done further, at the A. B. C. head office. If further checking is needed, the publisher pays that cost, too. An auditor spends several days in the Canadian Jewish Review office each year.

Q. Are these the only costs?

A. The greatest cost to the publisher is to see that the records are kept in order and up to date. The Canadian Jewish Review addressograph plates are posted to show the date and method and amount of payment; and the date of the subscription, and the length of its term. A publication must carry on the address label all information that the auditor would need to guide him in checking. A publication which sells subscriptions on short-term, or with a premium, or in combination with other publications, for instance, will carry all that information and more, on the address label, coded in some way.

Q. What do A. B. C. reports and statements say about the Canadian Jewish Review?

A. They tell at a quick glance the provincial breakdown; the amount sold in a period; that the Canadian Jewish Review never sells a subscription on a premium; never with a cut rate; never jointly with another publication; never as part of membership in an organization.

The Canadian Jewish Review is sold on its own merits, and always has been.
It has no affiliation with any organization.

A. B. C. reports and statements supply facts to advertisers.
These facts need to be known for advertising money to be spent wisely and honestly.

A. B. C. publications can never guarantee results. They do guarantee readership.

The Canadian Jewish Review is in its 22nd year of supplying facts to advertisers, investing to protect investments.

The Canadian Jewish Review is still the only publication reaching the general Jewish community in Canada, which can provide audited, paid, A. B. C. circulation facts and figures for the protection of each advertiser.
